LOIE FULLER FRENCH IDOL

At the Country Club House on Thursday, March 9.

A PLAN was made in last week's issue of The Register for donations in the shape of pound packages of non perishable foodstuffs—one pound, two, three, or twenty—from the mite you never will miss. These packages are to fill cases to be shipped to the Appui Belge, Palace of Louvre, France, to aid the widows and orphans of war-torn France and Free Belgium.

The Mite Society was organized by La Loie Fuller, the idol of France, an American girl born in Chicago, but who owes to France her great success. She had unfolded the principle of color and color scheme. She had created a new art, taking Paris by storm in 1892.

Now the crowning work of her life will be a great tour of the Orient and then America, for France and Free Belgium's victims of the war, and this mite gathering society which is establishing branches all over the country reaches out to those who, unable to give much, or too over-taxed already to give much, can spare a pound of something.

Eshleman Funeral Held Thursday

The funeral of John M. Eshleman, California's Lieutenant-Governor, who died Monday at Indio, Riverside county, was held Thursday afternoon under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of the Masonic Order, of which he was a member.

At the request of Mrs. Eshleman, the funeral services were simple, as it was her belief that this would have been Mr. Eshleman's wish.

Manuel Joseph and Miss Sylvie Married

The marriage of Manuel Joseph and Miss Francis Agnes Sylvie was solemnized in St. Joseph's church, Mission San Jose on Monday afternoon. Both Mr. Joseph and his bride are popular young people of Irvington and their many friends extend to them their best wishes and congratulations.

They will be at home to friends after Monday in their cottage on San Jose Road.

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP

*Its Story and the Story of Its People
Will Be Told In The Bulletin.*

Note—The growth and advantages of Washington Township and the achievements of its people will soon appear in The San Francisco Bulletin, in "Soldiers of the Soil," now running in The Bulletin. Rose Wilder Lane, who writes these articles, was in Niles last week on her trip through the township. The following article was written for the Register by Miss Lane.

BY ROSE WILDER LANE

YOU fortunate people of Washington Township—you can't guess how I am envying you these bright spring days, while I wander past your farms, and lean on your gates, and talk with some of you here and there.

You have the spring with its budding orchards and blooming poppies, and the young green of the hills, under the shifting lights and shadows of the wide sky; you have your own acres of rich lands, turning in long brown furrows behind your plows, with all their promise of growth and harvest. I, who have come from the noisy confusion and lifeless stone pavements of San Francisco, envy you.

"A man can't live on scenery," you say.

J. D. Ferry, Sr. Is Critically Ill

J. D. Ferry, Sr., is critically ill with dropsy at his home near Niles. He has been a sufferer from the disease for many years, but has attended to his shoe repairing business regularly until a few days ago when he became so ill he had to take to his bed. The doctors hold out little hope for his recovery.

The family is constantly at his bedside, his son, J. D. Ferry, Jr., having engaged J. H. Pastore of San Francisco to run his barber shop so that he can be near his father.

Ladies Guild

The Ladies Guild of the Niles Congregational church met in the Guild parlors Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Lindbergh as hostesses.

A large number of the ladies were present. A gift from Miss Estep of Oakland in memory of Mrs. L. E. Shinn was received. It is a beautiful picture of the statue, "Christianity Emerging from Paganism," and a copy of some beautiful verses to be hung just under the picture.

Communications from the paper company were received, and as there are nearly eight tons of paper on hand, it is expected to send the

J. E. WAMSLEY PASSES AWAY

*Prominent Irvington Citizen Dies
At Home of Daughter In Fresno.*

THE death of J. E. Wamsley of Irvington occurred while he was on a visit to his youngest daughter in Fresno on February 22. He was sick only a few days, but suffered greatly during that time.

Mr. Wamsley was Southern Pacific agent at Irvington for thirty-seven years, and was a most obliging man, always providing the public with any information required from his office. He was also school trustee for twenty years, during which time he took an active interest in matters pertaining to the improvement of the schools. He served one year as justice of the peace, and in that time made a record, compelling automobile drivers and motorcyclists to keep within the law, always dealing justice and not persecution to those brought before him.

He was always greatly interested in any project for the improvement of his home town, and it has lost an earnest worker, a highly respected citizen and a good friend.

He was in his seventy-first year, and leaves five sons, Harry, Fred,

CHICAGO WOMEN TO FACE GRAFT PROBE

Payroll of the Department of Public Welfare Held Up Pending Hearings

Chicago.—The City Civil Service Commission February 23 ordered the payroll of the Department of Public Welfare held up for investigation of graft charges made by Mrs. Page Waller Eaton against Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, department superintendent.

Allegations that Fred Lundin, former Congressman and present political adviser of Mayor Thompson, dominated the City Hall, and assertions of payroll padding in the Department of Public Welfare are features of the scandal in women's politics which is thrilling Chicago political circles.

It was announced that Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. Rowe, Alderman John Kjellander, Edward J. Brundage, former corporation counsel; Alderman Rodriguez, who presented Mrs. Eaton's charges to the City Council, and Mrs. Eaton's attorney, Seymour Stedman, would be summoned before the investigating committee.

In answer to reports that the Thompson mayoralty campaign fund had been swelled by money derived from persons on the municipal payroll, Mayor Thompson said:

"The truth about the Thompson campaign fund is that I was the goat. We had been short of money for some time, and as I came downtown one day, toward the close of the campaign, I was told by several of those active in my behalf that four or five of them would sign a note, along with me, on which we could borrow $50,000 to tide us over to the end of the campaign. The liability was to be limited for each signer. I signed the note, and the money was used in the campaign.

"When the note came due the bank asked me for my personal note for the

HIGH SEAS SCENE OF BRITISH SEIZURE

Search of American Steamer China Takes Place Ten Miles Off Shore

Washington.—The American Consul at Shanghai, China, February 23 submitted a partial report to the State Department on the recent seizure of thirty-eight Germans aboard the American steamship China by a British warship. The report gave no details, but fixed the location of the incident as "ten miles off shore."

Should it be established that the seizures took place on the high seas, as the Consul's report indicates, the State Department is expected to protest to Great Britain, reasserting its contention that persons on American vessels outside territorial waters are entitled to the same protection that would be due them in American territory. That principle was asserted in a protest to France

INTERNED VESSELS OF GERMANY SEIZED

Portuguese Naval Officer at Lisbon Takes Possession of Thirty-Six Ships

Lisbon.—The commander of the naval division here at 4 o'clock p. m., February 23, apparently of his own initiative, took forcible possession of thirty-six German and Austrian vessels lying in the Tagus river, hoisted the Portuguese colors on them and saluted them with a twenty-one gun salute from the Portuguese fleet.

It is said that the act of Captain Leotte Rego, in seizing the German and Austrian ships interned at Lisbon, was totally unexpected by the governing authorities, who were unaware of the step until it had been carried out. Captain Rego directed the operation from the destroyer Guadiana.

Despite many rumors since the outbreak of the war that Portugal was on the verge of declaring a state of war

SAYS BRITAIN WILL WAR TO THE END

Asquith Makes Stern Declaration in Answering Suggestions For Peace Negotiations

London.—Premier Asquith found himself unexpectedly face to face in the House of Commons February 23 with a new demand for the Government's views on peace. He took up the gauntlet almost eagerly, and in a bristling fifteen-minute speech made it clear that the British Government's determination to carry the war to an end without compromise had not abated since the early days of the struggle.

The only terms of peace Premier Asquith offered to the enemy countries were contained in the historic announcement which was the outstanding feature of his speech at the London Guild Hall in November, 1914, which he repeated:

He said: "We shall never sheathe the sword, which we have not lightly drawn, until Belgium—and, I will add, Serbia—recover in full measure all and more than they have sacrificed; until France is adequately secured against aggression; until the rights of the small nations of Europe are based upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed."

The Prime Minister's stern declaration created a deep impression on all parts of the House, and this found reflection subsequently in the lobbies. The occasion for the Premier's pronouncement was a speech which Philip Snowden of the Independent Labor party injected into the debate on the consolidated fund bill, a routine measure providing appropriations mainly for interest on the national debt.

Snowden urged that the time was ripe for peace negotiations, maintaining that there was little or no hope of a crushing victory on either side, and that if the war went on all the participants would be bankrupted in men and money.

Asquith's speech in reply was followed by a score of speeches, for the most part applauding the Premier's position. Two or three so-called peace advocates supported Snowden, but found themselves scarcely tolerated by their audience. The only applause during any of the pro-peace speeches came from a spectator in the strangers' gallery.

NEW PRIZE TAKEN BY RAIDER MOEWE

German Commerce Destroyer Makes Capture and Forwards Many Prisoners to Port

London.—A recent dispatch received from Santa Cruz, Teneriffe (Canary Islands), says the British steamer Westburn has put in there for repairs, flying the German flag and with a prize crew of seven men and one officer. The officer is believed to belong to the German raider Moewe.

In addition to her own crew there are 206 prisoners, taken from various British vessels, on the Westburn. The Westburn left Liverpool January 21 for Buenos Ayres.

The Westburn is a vessel of 3500 tons. She was built in 1893, and is owned by J. Westall of Sunderland. The prisoners on board came from the British steamers Flamenco, Horace, Clan McTavish and Cambridge, the British bark Edinburg and the Belgian steamer Luxembourg.

The Westburn, after her departure from Liverpool, was last reported as passing St. Vincent, Cape Verde, February 4. The Flamenco left Newport, England, for Valparaiso, January 21, and the Horace left Buenos Ayres January 26 for Liverpool. The Luxembourg was on a voyage from Newport for Buenos Ayres, having departed for the South American port January 18. The bark Edinburg sailed from Rangoon, India, September 22, for Liverpool. The Luxembourg and the Flamenco had been placed on the overdue list. The Cambridge cannot be identified.

The fact that the steamer Westburn has among the prisoners on board men from the British steamer Clan McTavish, which was sunk, after an exciting battle by the German raider Moewe off the east coast of Africa in January, seemingly would indicate that the Flamenco, Horace, Edinburg and Luxembourg had met a similar fate.

The Moewe, which captured the British South African liner Appam, which was later taken into Hampton Roads by a German prize crew, in addition to disposing of the Clan McTavish, destroyed six other steamers—the Corbridge, which was taken by the German

Naive and Pretty Crepe Frock

A naive and pretty frock of gray crepe de chine, such as that pictured above, will lend demureness and a touch of youth to its wearer, be she lacking in both. It has the charm of simplicity and of clever originality to commend it to those who know the value of these things that spell "class."

There are plenty of the widely flaring and quaint-looking skirts and the plain, drawn-in waists for those who would run after new gods (or a revival of old ones) in pursuit of fashion. But for those who remain loyal to the waist that blouses and the straight-hanging full skirt that has youthfulness of line always to commend it, the frock shown here will make a strong appeal.

The skirt denies the demand of the mode for extreme shortness and takes to itself a little extra length, required by the impression the finished frock must make. There is a straight pepum at each side hanging from a moderately wide, plain girdle. This is

The long, straight sleeves are gathered into a wide band at the wrist, and a flaring turnback cuff, of the cross-barred material, is set on to the band. In the management of the collar and cuffs and girdle the originality of the designer is most apparent, and the whole frock speaks for her sense of fitness and beauty.

Colors for Children.

Brown is a particularly fashionable hue for little folks this winter, and the range is from reddish chestnut to deep Havana, and brown tones are suggested in red trimmed with skunk fur or gold-colored silk trimmed with seal. A smart coat for a small boy is of brown cloth with seal collar and cuffs and lining of scarlet pussy willow taffeta. For a little girl there is a delicate coat of dahlia red velvet, lined with white satin and trimmed

WAYS TO USE LEMONS

FIVE SUGGESTIONS THAT ARE OF REAL MERIT.

Made Into Pie, Its Tart Flavor Will Be Appreciated by Many—Lemon Butter a Delicacy Highly Considered.

Lemon Pie.—Two slices of stale bread, two-thirds of an inch thick; one cupful of boiling water, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, two eggs. Dissolve the bread in hot water; add the sugar, butter, lemon and yolks of the eggs, well beaten. Bake in a moderate oven. When done make a meringue of the whites of the eggs and pile on top. Brown in a very slow oven.

Lemon Souffle.—One cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, one cupful of milk, two eggs. Cream the butter, sugar and flour together. Add the juice and rind of the lemon, then the beaten yolks and the milk. Add the well-beaten whites last. Bake in a pudding dish placed in a large pan half full of boiling water. This is a most convenient pudding to make in a hurry, as it does not need a sauce. The top is a delicious souffle and the bottom a creamy sauce.

Lemon Butter.—Half cupful of water, half cupful of flour, half cupful of sugar, one egg, salt. Boil the water and add the flour mixed to a paste. Then add the sugar, the egg well beaten and a pinch of salt. Cook until stiff and creamy. Take off from the stove and add four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a teaspoonful of grated rind. Spread between slices of bread for the children's sandwiches.

Lemon Cheese Cakes.—One heaping tablespoonful of butter, two-thirds cupful of sugar, two eggs, one lemon. Cream the butter and sugar, add the yolks of the eggs, well beaten, and the juice and grated rind of the lemon and cook till thick in a lemon boiler. Bake in muffin pans, lined with pastry, and cover the tops with meringue made from the whites.

Lemon Cream Pie.—Half cupful of water, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, two eggs, one lemon. Line two plates with pastry and bake. When cold, put together with the following: Boil the water and add the cornstarch, mixed with a little cold water, and the lemon juice. Beat the yolks of the eggs with the sugar, add a pinch of salt and cook all together till thick. Make a meringue of the whites and spread over the top. Do not put together till just before it is to be served.

Dressed for the Promenade

To discover the fairest thing in mortal eyes it is only necessary to stroll up the avenue or boulevard on a bright winter's day. If there is anything fairer than the little girl, dressed out for the promenade, in her midwinter finery, it remains undiscovered by a beauty-loving world. Next to her, the eye of mankind is delighted by the sturdy boy who is so much of a small man in his topcoat, hat, gloves, and cane, that are miniatures of those worn by the grown-up world.

The little girl of five years, and the boy of four, shown in the picture above, are correctly and beautifully dressed. It is a satisfaction to consider that this result of good judgment requires little money, and that even the children of millionaires cannot be more comfortably or more attractively clothed.

The girl is all in white, with a coat made of white chinchilla. It is cut on plain, ample lines, hanging straight except for a little flare in the plaited skirt. The collar, cuffs, and border at the bottom are of white fur, and there is a muff to match. These might be of white fox, but seldom are. The long-haired "bunny"—the that is liable to be extravagant in price, as much fine handwork comes into its construction. But bonnets just as pretty are not too difficult for the home milliner and when the cost of workmanship is eliminated the most elaborate ones are within reach of the average mother.

Long ribbed stockings, lined with black, and black-and-white shoes finish the toilette of the little maid whose face is like a blossom in the snow.

The boy wears a dark tan coat with patch pockets, a brown velour hat and brown gloves. His suit is of linen with knickerbockers and Russian blouse. In his ribbed hose and white buttoned shoes he concedes himself to be not yet arrived at man's estate.

Fashion Notes.

New parasols for spring are being graced with extra short handles, which carry wrist straps of novel device, made of leather ribbon and velvet.

CABBAGE IN VARIED FORMS

Vegetable That Is Usually Considered Somewhat Plebeian Has Many Possibilities.

Cabbage has not a very good reputation among some people, and it is a stand-by winter vegetable of thousands of others. Even for the fastidious taste there are delicious ways of cooking cabbage, and in salad it can also be used with appetizing results.

Chop a small head of cabbage, removing the heart. Put three tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan, and two tablespoonfuls of flour, and turn in the cabbage after the butter and flour are well blended, then pour on gradually a cupful of milk. Bring to the boiling point and add two teaspoonfuls of salt, a few dashes of pepper, mix thoroughly and cover tightly and cook forty minutes on the back of the range. About five cupfuls of cabbage are used for the other ingredients. All vegetarians will relish this toothsome dish. Its flavor is delicate and delightful.

Baked Cabbage.—Soak cabbage one hour in cold water, then boil ten minutes after cutting in good sized pieces. Place in a baking dish and cover with one tablespoonful of butter, one of flour and one cupful of milk. Salt and pepper to taste. Cover with bread crumbs and bake one hour.

Creamed Cabbage.—Soak a cabbage for half an hour in cold water, then trim it and cut it in eighths, and drop it into a saucepan of boiling salted water. Add a clove and a whole onion and cook until tender. Remove the onion, drain the cabbage and chop it fine. Put in a saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter and slowly add three tablespoonfuls of cream. Heat thoroughly, season with pepper and salt and serve.

USES FOR PARAFFIN PAPER

Cheap Article Which It Will Be Found Economical to Keep Supply on Hand.

Paraffin paper costs only about five cents or ten cents for a big roll, and I try to keep some on hand always.

Besides being fine for lining almost every kind of a mold from cake to ice cream, it's also good to use inside a dish in which fish, like salmon loaf or some other souffle dish, is being cooked. It's easy to remove—and, joy of joys—as you throw away the paraffin paper you throw away the fish aroma which makes the washing of fish utensils so odious.

Then it's also good to use to wrap around foods before placing them in the ice box. Of course, I cover almost all foods with the cover that comes with the dish. But what can you use to cover a roast that has been cooked? I haven't a dish cover of any kind

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG In "LOLA"

"THERE is a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may." The truth of this saying is exemplified in the unfolding of the thrilling story of "Lola." The story of "Lola" is one of the most remarkable that has ever been put on the screen and there is no doubt that on its release it will become a subject of widespread discussion and divergence of opinion. Was Lola really dead? Was her father justified in his scientific experiments? Was Lola to blame for the inexplicable change in her character or was she but the victim of some inscrutable fate? These are some of the questions that will be asked. Whatever the answer may be, it will be universally conceded that in the adaption of Owen Davis's play, picturized by James Young, the favorite picture star, Clara Kimball Young has found a vehicle which enables her to give full vent to her unique gift of emotion characterizations and at the same time portray a story of extraordinary interest.

DISCONTENTED ANIMALS.

The cat was sitting in the barn doorway, sunning herself. She licked her paws and rubbed them over her face and then stretched out for a nap. The dog in the other door was watching her. "Miss Puss," he said, "you certainly have an easy life—nothing to do but sleep and eat. When your food is ready someone calls you. Now, I have to go for mine, and a great many times I have to remind the cook that I am in existence."

"I don't see that you work very hard," said the cat, who had become fully awake. "You sleep a good bit yourself. I have this barn to keep clear of mice and rats and the house also, and if one little mouse happens to get into the house the cook says that cat is getting too much to eat, and then I am given short rations for a while. I cannot even look admiringly at a chicken without being suspected of wrongdoing. You are a very fortunate dog."

"Now, isn't that just like a cat," replied the dog. "I would like to know who is responsible for the safety of things around here if I'm not. The doors are locked at night, and I am left on guard in my house in the yard."

"I Don't See That You Work Very Hard."

I must sleep with one eye open, and if I do hear anything, and bark, someone calls out of the window to know why I am making all the noise; and if off. If you were a horse you might have cause for complaining."

The cow, who had been listening to all these complaints, mused and said: "Suppose anyone of you had to lead my life."

The cat, the dog and the horse laughed at her. "Your life," they said, "is one of ease. You do not work, and nothing is required of you."

"Oh! is that what you think?" said the cow. "None of you are in daily danger of death, and I am. Do you happen to know that I am required to give a certain amount of milk each day, and of a good quality, and if it is not nice and creamy, I am led to the slaughter house and made into beef. You talk of a hard life, you do not know what it is."

Just then the farmer came in. "What is all this noise about?" he asked. So they told him.

"Very well," he said, "I will have you all changed into the animal you wish to be; now think it over."

After a while he asked the dog what he had chosen to be, but the dog had decided to remain as he was. Then he turned to the cat, but she had run out; she did not care to be any larger than she was. And the horse and cow had also decided to remain in their present condition.

"Well," said the farmer, "if you are all satisfied, do not let me hear any more complaining."

This story should teach us that discontent leads only to unhappiness, and we should wish to change only when we are fitted for the things and places we aspire to.

CANDY ETIQUETTE IN JAPAN

It Is Not Considered Good Form to Partake of Sweets on Street—Children Observe Rule.

But with all that, they have their niceties about eating, Homer Croy writes of the Japanese in Leslie's. One day as I was going along the street I saw a candy man sitting on a stool beside his cart fashioning delicacies with his two flying thumbs. Taking a ball of candy mixture he would give it a few pinches, a twist, dab on a red spot and there would be a fish. Taking up another ball he would give it a few twists and he would have a radish.

Half a dozen of these he would put into a thumb-made candy plate, and sell for half a cent. Buying a plate of tiny delicacies I gave it to a girl, expecting to see her down it in good old American fashion, but instead of falling on it greedily she made a courtly bow and tore down the street as fast as her wooden shoes would let her. I looked after her in astonishment, thinking that this upset every child theory I had and determined to try it again. So I waited until the two flying

A Small World.

Cazalet sat up so suddenly that his head hit the woodwork over the upper berth. His own voice still rang in his startled ears. He wondered how much he had said, and how far it could have carried above the throb of the liner's screws and the mighty pounding of the water against her plates. And then he remembered how he had been left behind at Naples, and rejoined the Kaiser Fritz at Genoa, only to find that he no longer had a cabin to himself.

A sniff assured Cazalet that he was neither alone at the moment nor yet the only one awake; he pulled back the swaying curtain, and there on the settee sat a man with a strong blue chin and the quizzical solemnity of an animated sphinx.

It was his cabin companion, an American named Hilton Toye, and Cazalet addressed him with nervous familiarity.

"I say! Have I been talking in my sleep?"

"Why, yes!" replied Hilton Toye, and broke into a smile that made a human being of him.

Cazalet forced a responsive grin. "What did I say?" he asked, with an amused curiosity at variance with his shaking hand and shining forehead.

Toye took him in from crown to fingertips, with something deep behind his kindly smile. "I judge," said he, "you were dreaming of some drama you've been seeing ashore, Mr. Cazalet."

"Dreaming!" said Cazalet, wiping his face. "It was a nightmare! I must have turned in too soon after dinner. But I should like to know what I said."

"I can tell you word for word. You said, 'Henry Craven—dead!' and then you said, 'Dead—dead—Henry Craven!' as if you'd got to have it both ways to make sure."

"It's true," said Cazalet, shuddering. "I saw him lying dead, in my dream."

Hilton Toye took a gold watch from his waistcoat pocket. "Thirteen minutes to one in the morning," he said, "and now it's September eighteenth. Take a note of that, Mr. Cazalet. It may be another case of second sight

"Is that so? No. I never heard that," said he.

"You hear it now. He did all that, indirectly, and I didn't realize it at the time. I was too young, and the whole thing laid me out too flat; but I know it now, and I've known it long enough. It was worse than a crash. It was a scandal. That was what finished us off, all but Henry Craven! There'd been a gigantic swindle—special investments recommended by the firm, bogus certificates and all the rest of it. We were all to blame, of course. My poor father ought never to have been a poet. Even I—I was only a youngster in the office, but I ought to have known what was going on. But Henry Craven did know. He was in it up to the neck, though a fellow called Scruton did the actual job. Scruton got fourteen years—and Craven got our old house on the river."

"And feathered it pretty well!" said Toye, nodding. "Yes, I did hear that. And I can tell you they don't think any better of him, in the neighborhood, for going to live right there. But how did he stop the other man's mouth, and—how do you know?"

"Never mind how I know," said Cazalet. "Scruton was a friend of mine, though an older man; he was good to me, though he was a wrong 'un himself. He paid for it—paid for two—that I can say! But he was engaged to Ethel Craven at the time, was going to be taken into partnership on their marriage, and you can put two and two together for yourself."

"Did she wait for him?"

"About as long as you'd expect of the breed! She was her father's daughter. I wonder you didn't come across her and her husband!"

"I didn't see so much of the Craven crowd," replied Hilton Toye. "I wasn't stuck on them either. Say, Cazalet, I wouldn't be that old man when Scruton comes out, would you?"

But Cazalet showed that he could hold his tongue when he liked, and his grim look was not so legible as some that had come and gone before. This one stuck until Toye produced a big flask from his grip, and the talk shifted to less painful ground. It was the last night in the Bay of Biscay, and Cazalet told how he had been in it a fortnight on his way out by sailing-but once more Toye was regarding him as shrewdly as when the night was younger, and the littleness of the world had not yet made them confident and boon companion.

Eight bells actually struck before their great talk ended and Cazalet swore that he missed the "watches aft, sir!" of the sailing-vessel ten years before.

"Say!" exclaimed Hilton Toye, knitting his brows over some nebulous recollection of his own. "I seem to have heard of you and some of your yarns before. Didn't you spend nights in a log-hut miles and miles from any human being?"

It was as they were turning in at last, but the question spoiled a yawn for Cazalet.

"Sometimes, at one of our out-stations," said he, looking puzzled.

"I've seen your photograph," said Toye, regarding him with a more critical stare. "But it was with a beard."

"I had it off when I was ashore the other day," said Cazalet. "I always meant to, before the end of the voyage."

"I see. It was a Miss Macnair showed me that photograph—Miss Blanche Macnair lives in a little house down there near your old home. I judge hers is another old home that's been broken up since your day."

"They've all got married," said Cazalet.

"Except Miss Blanche. You write to her some, Mr. Cazalet?"

"Once a year—regularly. It was a promise. We were kids together," he explained, as he climbed back into the upper berth.

"Guess you were a lucky kid," said the voice below. "She's one in a thousand, Miss Blanche Macnair!"

CHAPTER II.

MATERNAL INSTINCT IS ALIVE

Not Necessarily Abandoned by Women Who Have Chosen to Pursue a "Career."

We often hear that women used to be more maternal than they are now. The difference was that they had larger families and were compelled to do more work about the house, because modern household conveniences were then wanting, asserts Dr. Mary Kent Isham, a successful New York physician. The fact of a large family is not necessarily an indication that there is much maternal feeling in the mother. The maternal instinct is found in women who want children—whether they have them or not—and who occupy themselves preferably in ways which deal with the young.

The majority of single women and of women with careers do not lack the maternal spirit and do not lack the sex instinct, but they are wanting in a certain recklessness which would enable them to accept the wrong husband or go in for what has been called "unbridled motherhood." They are perhaps trained into too great self-control and caution. Others are too intense and passionately maternal to marry. They must have whole crowds of children with whom to deal, like the old woman in the shoe. The husband is a secondary consideration. A large number of women who are engaged in social service and who, for various reasons, have been deprived of homes of their own, or find the duties in their homes too limited, are spending their generous helping of maternal energy in a larger social field.

SWEEPS DUST FROM RECORDS

Automatic Cleaner for the Phonograph That Will Save Much Time and Labor.

An automatic cleaner for phonograph records, invented by Joseph W. Pitcher of Washington, D. C., has just been patented. It consists of a ring that fits around the sound box, an arm extending downward therefrom just behind the needle, and a brush made of alternate layers of bristles and felt. The bristles engage the surface of the record first, removing dust from the lines, and the felt sweeps small particles out of the needle's way.

WHEN ONE BORE MEETS MATE

Man Who Has Just Been Presented With New Baby Is Introduced to Owner of New Automobile.

At a smoker some time ago reference was made to the matter of favorite topics of conversation.

One afternoon Brown and Green were communing with each other in the lobby of a hotel, when a man with his countenance shining like great gladness headed their way.

"Here comes Madison," remarked Brown to his friend. "He has just been presented with a new baby, and he will talk us to death in telling of its glories."

"That's all right," responded Green, glancing in the opposite direction. "I guess we will be able to fix the thing."

"Come again, old man," said Brown, wondering. "I don't get you."

"There's a neighbor of mine over there who has just bought a new automobile," explained Green. "We will introduce them and then take a slide." —Philadelphia Telegraph.

VALUATION.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.—Adv.

NO EXCITEMENT IN LONDON

American Lighted Cigarette and Waited for Something to Happen—Had No Monocle.

"So you are just back from London?"

"Arrived last week."

"Did you have any exciting experiences over there?"

"None worth speaking about."

"But what did you do when Zeppelins arrived?"

"Oh, I—er—lighted a cigarette and waited for something to happen."

"Umph! Sheer bravado!"

"Of course. I had to do something to make those bally Britishers think I wasn't frightened, and had no monocle to adjust."

THE GIRL WITH A CLEAR SKIN WINS

If you, too, are embarrassed by a pimply, blotchy, unsightly complexion, just try Resinol Soap regularly for a week and see if it does not make a blessed difference in your skin. In severe cases a little Resinol Ointment should also be used. Resinol Soap helps to make red, rough hands and arms soft and white, and to keep the hair healthy and free from dandruff. Resinol Soap contains no free alkali. Sold by all druggists.—Adv.

FIGURES DOUBLE IN MEXICO

Announcer at Prize Fight Has No Trouble in Explaining Length of Advertised Battle.

In the good old days, before revolutions raged with their present frequency, there used to be prize fights at Juarez, just across the international boundary from El Paso, and gentlemen of sporting inclinations from the American side of the line attended regularly.

One sunny afternoon, as the gladiators sat in their respective corners waiting for the tap of the bell, the official announcer climbed through the ropes and, standing in the middle of the ring, addressed the gathering.

"We are now about to have the principal event of the day," he stated, "a ten-round bout between—"

"Hold on there," broke in a tall Texan; "didn't you advertise that this was to be a twenty-round fight?"

"Twenty rounds, Mex.," explained the announcer without an instant's hesitation, and went right on with his speech.—Saturday Evening Post.

"Here comes Dubwaite. He quotes Shakespeare on the slightest provocation, but does it indifferently well."

"We'll have to be careful not to mention any subject that will start him off."

"What shall we discuss?"

"Suppose we talk about appendicitis? So far as I know, there's no reference in Shakespeare's work to appendicitis."

Real Conversation.

"I hope you don't indulge in gossip."

"I'm afraid," replied young Mrs. Torkins, "that I like it. Of course, I don't try to make any up for myself, and I don't care much for what my friends now and then mention. But I must say that Charley was never so interesting as he was while he was serving on the grand jury."

It's All Dark.

"A man should try to make the best of his misfortunes," remarked the philosopher.

"True enough," replied the man with a worried look. "But when an inexperienced motorist tries to change a tire without assistance, there is simply no brighter side to the performance."

"I've been all over de world, mum," said the tattered tourist. "Fur a little breakfas' I'll tell you how de other half lives."

HORSE NOT YET OBSOLETE

Will Remain, It May Be Safely Asserted, Long After Some Prophets Have Been Forgotten.

Some prophets and sons of prophets who predict that horses on the farms will soon be only a memory will have passed away, and pleasing epitaphs will be carved into the stones which mark their resting place, long before their prophecies become fact. The introduction of the farm tractor will not, as some believe, remove the horses from the fields and from their pastures, Farm Machinery asserts. The advent of the street cars did not have that effect upon horses, neither did the bicycle nor automobile. Today there are more horses in this country than there were ten years ago, and prices are considerably higher. The one thing that the farm tractor will do is to supply the need of power on the farms which horses cannot give. Take away the farm tractors which are in use today and several hundred thousand horses would be required to replace them, or if horses could not be had the lands would have to go unplowed and untilled. The number of tractors now in use will be multiplied many times within the next ten years, but there will be as many horses in this country as there are today, and prices will be even higher than now.

Farm tractors are becoming a necessity, just as electric street cars have become—the same as telephones have supplanted the telegraph in a way and have taken the place of messenger boys and quick delivery of mail. No one will agree that there are not more miles of telegraph wire in use today than ten years ago, nor can it be said that there are fewer messenger boys, yet the telephone is in almost every business house and in many households, doing work for which there was little demand a few years ago.

The farm tractors will simply fit into the greater needs of the country and will do the heavier chores and drudgery which horses are little fit for. They will not replace the horses, but will simply assist them and make life easier for them. They will also enable farmers to breed better horses because their mothers will be kept for that purpose instead of spending half or more of their time in doing heavy work. Let us not dream too long upon the practicability of the horseless farm. It is a long way off, as yet.
